BONNIE LORE - an occasional column by her long-suffering husband. "Bonnie's Auction" Chapter 14

In early 1976 Bonnie began telling me I was a wonderful farmer. We did have a few cows, but she went on and on about what a wonderful farmer I was. Then I found out why. She said, "They need a farmer to go to Sri Lanka." (She had heard that you could get a baby in Sri Lanka.)

I cajoled and implored and pleaded. Nothing doing. (She knows I'm totally enchanted with her - and she takes advantage.) Bonnie decided to sell all our belongings, to help pay for the trip. Our auctioneer neighbour, John Archie MacLennan, came over with pad and pen and listed everything Bonnie could see, hundreds of items including:

antique stereopticon complete with pictures, large bean pot, dining room table, very large quantity of books, sad irons, spittoon, elec. butter churn 5 gal cap., wooden Canada goose, harness, team britchens new, hay elevator, walking plow, Many articles too numerous to mention.

Also for sale: 4 yr. old cow, 3 - 2 yr. old steers, 2 yr. old open, 1 yr. old open all Holstein, 2 ganders, 6 geese, 25 hens, 1 mare pony, pair Muscovy duck and ducklings.

I was able to hide the tractor and a quarter of my books in Ron's barn next door. Bonnie sold everything else: the washer, the dishes, the car - and every stitch - even my overcoat. She said, "You won't need that in Sri Lanka."

There was a carved wooden statue about a foot high. I said to the crowd: "This is something I've been trying to get rid of for years - an African fertility goddess." As the laughter died down, there was brisk bidding for it. I don't remember who got it - likely some other unsuspecting fellow. Nor do I know whether it worked for his wife as effectively as it did for Bonnie.

We sold our prize cow, Mavourneen. Bonnie had named our cows after old songs, e.g. "Come back to Erin, Mavourneen, Mavourneen..." The demure lass in the song had delicate feminine charm. Our Mavourneen was a trouble-maker. Just as I was patting her and remarking to the crowd how gentle she was, she took off right through the people, stepping on someone's toe. I pursued her down the pasture. No one wanted to bid on her. She really was a gentle cow, but the crowd had spooked her. John Archie bid and got her very cheaply for his own herd.

We made about $4000, and Bonnie got funding from a Foundation to enable us to go to Sri Lanka with our seven youngest children, and later to India. From this 18-month trip Bonnie netted four adopted boys from India for herself, and tons of kids for other families. But thankfully she's through with adoptions now.

SHILPI

In the summer of 1991, Shilpi Somaya, age 19, was an Intern at Hyderabad Child Haven. Nine years later (2010) she wrote a novel: Secret Daughter. At this writing it is number two on the Globe and Mail Book List. Shilpi Somaya Gowda is now married, with children. The book traces the story of a child given up for adoption, and follows the lives of the adoptive family and the birth family.

This novel rings true. Shilpi really knows India. She also understands adoption. She grew up in Toronto area with her birth parents. In its depth of cultural understanding, the book reminds me of those by Pearl S Buck, which I read a half a century ago - as many as I could lay my hands on - perhaps a dozen. I look forward to reading the next dozen books by Shilpi. FC

Left, the stream of water has been slowed (falling, lower center of photo) so Child Haven Manager Norbula could take Intern Robin Cappuccino into the basement of the barley mill. Full-force water turns the paddle wheel, which turns one of two stones above.

TIBET, The little stick rubs against the turning stone, and jiggles the barley grains down into the hole. The flour comes out all around the stone onto a cement floor. There are several of these very old mills along this small river.
